THE GROWING CROPS.

Reports from Our Correspondents. Our correspondent T. F., writing from Lexington on the 1st. savs:

1. The increased area in cotton this year over 1871 will not exceed ten per cent.

2. In cotton planted early this year the stand is good, and the plant grows of well; in late planting the stand is not so good.

3. Apart from the question of acreage the crop does not promise a better yield than at the time last year.

this time last year. 4. Wheat and oats are good. Corn is not yet iar enough advanced to judge of the prospect. River bottoms are not fairly underway yet. The area in grain is about the same as last year; on an average, the grain crop will not be altogether sufficient to do till next error comes in.

orop comes in.

5: A larger quantity of commercial fertilizers has been used this year than last.

6. Expenses of making crop about the same as last year. Labor is doing well at present. Fairfield.

Our correspondent J. W. R. Jr., writing from Monticello on June 1st, says:

I have delayed answering until now you quiries of the 15th May as to the crop pros pects, &c., for the reason that partial showers were falling at the time, with indications of a general rain, which would have brought up a good stand of cotton. Our hopes were not realized; consequently the stand is very imperfect. The area planted in cotton, according to the

It is too early in the season to determine anything about the corn crop, as everything depends on the seasons through June and July. The area planted about the same as last year, with generally a first-rate stand. Williamsburg.

Our correspondent G. S. B., writing from Indiantown on the 1st, says:

The area planted in cotton is about the same as last season. The stand is hardly as good, owing principally to the very dry weather we had in April and lat of May, though the plant looks healthy, and is growing vigorously. The grain crops in area are about the same as in 1871. Though corn is not as forward as it was at this date last year, it is in better condition, and with favorable seasons enough will be made to supply this section.

Reports of the Rural Press.

The Lancaster Ledger says: "Good rains have fallen in this county during the past week. Farmers look cheerful."

The Georgetown Times says: "Since our The Georgetown Times says: "Since our last issue we have had several refreshing showers, which have greatly improved the appearance of the rice and uplands crops. The late very warm dry weather had caused the rice that has been planted to improve very rapidly, but fully one-lourth of the crop has not yet been planted. In consequence of the lateness of the spring, an unusual quantity of June rice will be planted, and it will depend very much upon the lateness of the Fall as to the quantity of rice that will be made in this the same as that of last year."

The Union Times says: "Partial and genial raina have visited portions of our county the past week, and more favorable reports of the condition of the crops reach us. A fine rain fell a few miles above this place on Saturday night last, which left the ground too wet to plough for three days. At this point and along the line of the railroad some miles below, the rain was very light and the crops are suffering. We, however, are inclined to believe that the cotton, generally, throughout the county looks quite promising, but backward. Wheat promises well. Oats almost a failure is many places, and the best are inferior. Potatoes very poor. Gardens almost a failure," a failure,"
The Laurens Herald says: "It still continue

The Laurens Herald says: "It still continues warm and dry, and the crops generally are suffering. No rain here for two weeks."

The Chesterfield Democrat says: "The crops in this section are several weeks later than at this time last year, in consequence of the late spring and dry weather. Many farmers complain of bad stands of both corn and cotton. That porton of the crops which had come up previous to the drought is now doing very well."
